Macro Update

- Impact of US Election on Indonesia: Donald Trump's victory in the US election is expected to influence Indonesia's economy through trade policies, currency effects, and capital flows. In the short term, a stronger US dollar could lead to capital outflows and increase the cost of dollar-denominated debt for Indonesia. Over the long term, potential dollar depreciation may ease rupiah pressures and open opportunities for favorable bilateral trade agreements.
- Foreign Exchange Reserves: Indonesia's foreign exchange reserves hit a record USD 151.2 billion in October, providing a strong buffer against external economic shocks. This high reserve level supports the rupiah's stability amid global uncertainties and allows for greater financial resilience in facing external pressures.
- Economic Stimulus for Domestic Growth: President Prabowo's administration is focusing on strengthening middle-class spending and optimizing state-owned enterprises (SOEs) through the establishment of the Danantara super-holding entity. These initiatives are part of a broader strategy to drive growth, create jobs, and improve productivity in key sectors like manufacturing and technology.
- USD 1.2 Billion Investment in Digital Infrastructure: Indonesia is positioning itself as a regional leader in digital transformation with a USD 1.2 billion tech investment. This funding, led by Indonesia's sovereign wealth fund in partnership with Singapore's Granite Asia, will enhance digital infrastructure and drive innovation in Southeast Asia's growing digital economy.
- Federal Reserve Rate Cut: The US Federal Reserve recently reduced its key interest rate by 25 basis points to 4.5%-4.75%, signaling a cautious approach to US economic uncertainties. This adjustment provides relief for Indonesia, with Bank Indonesia considering a similar rate reduction to support economic stability.
