Macro Update

- The Federal Reserve cut its benchmark interest rate by 25 basis points in December 2024, bringing the target range to 4.25%-4.5%. This marks the third consecutive rate cut this year, signaling a shift toward a more accommodative monetary policy in response to evolving economic conditions. Looking ahead to 2025, policymakers now anticipate two rate cuts, totaling 50 basis points, a downward adjustment from the previously expected 100 basis points. This change reflects the Fed's acknowledgment of persistent inflationary pressures and the resilience of economic activity, necessitating a cautious approach to monetary easing.

- In line with our view, Bank Indonesia (BI) maintained its benchmark interest rate at 6% during the December meeting, amidst ongoing pressures on the Rupiah (IDR) from a stronger USD, foreign outflows, and high seasonal demand for foreign currencies. The IDR faced depreciation since 11 December, testing the psychological 16,000/USD level, driven by uncertainties around the US Federal Reserve's policy, limited room for FFR cuts, and a global shift towards USD assets due to geopolitical risks. BI also kept deposit and lending facility rates unchanged, reflecting a balanced approach to supporting economic stability. While BI aims to sustain inflation control and economic fundamentals, persistent USD strength and global risk-off sentiment may continue to challenge the IDR, necessitating macro-prudential and forex interventions. Looking forward, risks such as declining commodity prices and Indonesia's twin deficits could further pressure the currency, particularly as global growth slows.
